INTRODUCTION

COLUMBIA’s initial index is the result of a two-year collaborative effort by a librarian and a historian. Standards established by professionals in the field were followed. In addition, the compilers consulted the indexes of several historical quarterlies. The resulting style for COLUMBIA is a composite of both influences. When, on infrequent occasions, established rules for indexing seemed counter-productive to understanding the themes of Pacific Northwest history, the compilers asked themselves, “What form would best assist Nancy Compau, our professional colleague who heads the Northwest Collection of the Spokane Public Library, and others like her who we hope will benefit from access to the information in COLUMBIA?” Above all, this index is intended to be useful and usable.

Entries are arranged alphabetically under author, name and subject headings, with references including volume, issue, and page number(s). Information on the anarchist movement, for example, in volume 4, issue number 1, on pages 3-10 will be referenced as: 4(1):3-10. Subentries are included as needed. Full names of persons are provided, even when the article contains a shortened form. In the case of native people, the tribal unit, in parentheses, follows the name. The names of ships are also identified, in parentheses, as to type of vessel: sloop, brig, schooner, etc. Full titles of articles appear under the author’s name, but are not listed separately. Title entries appear only in those few instances where no author is associated with the work indexed. Cross-references are included when information relating to a subject appears under another entry (i.e., See), or when additional information may be found under a related entry (i.e., See also).

Passing references to persons, places and events are not indexed. Similarly, titles of books and articles noted only incidentally, or listed in the “Additional Reading” section of the magazine, are not included. The names of authors of “Letters to the Editor” are not indexed, nor are the names of features such as “History Album,” and “From the Collection,” though the material in them can be found under subject headings. Opinions in “From the Editor” and “From the President” are also not indexed.

Books quoted or extensively noted in the text of articles are indexed by author with references identified by the symbol (N). Books reviewed in COLUMBIA are likewise listed under author, with the symbol (R) following the page reference. Correspondence that comments or corrects articles is attached to the author entry for that article with the page reference followed by the symbol (C).
