The first jazz bands appeared in Denver in about 1877. They were usually made up of a piano, a guitar, and a set of drums. Most bands were started by men who moved to Denver from the Deep South. The men in these bands were treated as heroes and were the toast of society.