

From the Editor 2

History Commentary 3

Self-destruction—Meriwether Lewis’s final act of “ultimate courage.”

By Dr. Reimert Thorolf Ravenholt

A Celebration of Tradition and Community 7

A look at sumo, the Japanese national sport, as practiced in the Pacific Northwest up to World War II.

By Joseph R. Svinth

Following Fortune 15

An entrepreneur of unsurpassed daring, Jedediah Smith plunged into the heart of the frontier that was the American West.

By James C. Auld

Historic Fort Steilacoom 22

Founded 150 years ago this summer as the first American military installation on Puget Sound.

By Steve Dunkelberger and Walter Neary

Rivers of Ice 24

Mount Rainier’s glaciers embrace its flanks like the “icy tentacles” of a “frozen octopus.”

By Ruth Kirk

History Album 31

Potlatch Day in Seattle.

The Olympia Letters of D. Ellis Willes 32

An image of early Washington Territory emerges from this Episcopal missionary’s correspondence.

By David E. Shawver

From the Collection 39

New York to Seattle in 31 hours.

Puget Sound’s Mosquito Fleet 40

Remembering the days when passengers, mail and commercial goods traveled the inland waters aboard steam-powered taxis.

By Carolyn W. Callaghan

Correspondence & Additional Reading 44

Columbia Reviews 46